Jean-Paul Sartre and Simone de Beauvoir.

First Run/Icarus Films (2005) "Jean-Paul Sartre (1905-1980) and Simone de Beauvoir (1908-1986), two of the most influential and controversial thinkers of our time, are presented in this unique documentary originally broadcast in 1967 and photographed by Michel Brault, one of Canada's most distinguished documentary cameramen and filmmakers. ... For the first time, the two allow a candid glimpse into their private lives. They show us the places they've lived, reveal their thoughts and work habits, and discuss, albeit discreetly, the nature of their relationship. Simone de Beauvoir modestly confides that they agreed to be filmed for all those who have enjoyed their works and all those who will one day read them"--Radio Canada Website.

Living With Dying.

Films for the Humanities & Sciences, [2005]

Death, which inevitably comes to all, is nonetheless treated as a taboo subject in America. In this program, Bill Moyers describes the search for new ways of thinking -- and talking -- about dying. Forgoing the usual reluctance that most Americans show toward speaking about death, patients and medical professionals alike come forward to examine the end of life with honesty, courage, and even humor, demonstrating that dying can be an incredibly rich experience for both the terminally ill and their loved ones.

Can true spirituality survive in the face of oppression and religious fundamentalism? Canadian author Margaret Atwood speaks to Bill Moyers about agnosticism, the hunger for meaning, and the distinction between belief and knowledge. In the Martin Amis novel London Fields, a cynical and disjointed society hurtles toward doomsday; in his follow-up book, Time's Arrow, the narrative follows the reverse course - backward from the Holocaust to purity and innocence. Bill Moyers talks with the author about humanity's present condition and the conflict between fundamentalism and secular values.

Who Gets to Know?

Films for the Humanities & Sciences,
(2003)

"When it comes to genetic testing, how much should a patient be told? If the news is bad, who else should the patient inform? And should such privileged information be made available to employers, insurance companies, and others? This Fred Friendly Seminar moderated by Harvard Law School's Arthur Miller offers a compelling discourse on the far-reaching ethical, social, legal, and economic implications of genetic testing"—Container.
