Abstract Art.

Films for the Humanities & Sciences
(2004)

"In this program, artists John Hoyland and Sir Anthony Caro; Charlotte Mullins, of the Irish Independent on Sunday; and others examine the history of Abstract Art. After a capsule summary of Impressionism and Cubism, the program tracks the full flowering of Abstract Art, stretching into Abstract Expressionism and Minimalism. Special attention is given to Wassily Kandinsky, Piet Mondrian, Jackson Pollock, Mark Rothko, Jason Martin, and Fiona Rae. Footage of artists at work along with a wide selection of paintings and sculpture round out this...overview"—

Achieving the Unachievable.

CineFête, c2007

Discusses how the art of M.C. Escher helped mathematician Hendrik Lenstra overcome the Infinity Barrier. In 1956, Dutch artist Maurits C. Escher began a new work that challenged the laws of perspective to a point he found himself unable to pass, the so-called "infinity barrier". The challenges contained in the uncompleted work continued to be unsolved for over 50 years, until mathematician Hendrik Lenstra discovered a way to finally break through the apparently unbreakable wall.

African Art: Legacy of Oppression.

Films for the Humanities & Sciences
(1999)

"Belgium's Tervuren Museum contains the world's largest collection of Central African art ... Noted journalist Paul Solman discusses the power and the true price of this collection with art historian Ramona Austin and journalist/author Adam Hochschild. In the immense Congo region, there are more than 250 different cultures, so there is a broad range of artistic styles to be found there. Austin is particularly drawn to the emotionally riveting abstracts, with their modernistic qualities and generalized forms that influenced Picasso and other European masters ... But how did the Tervuren collect this body of art? Hochschild says that when Belgium's King Leopold II colonized and brutally exploited this territory during the late 1800s, ivory and rubber were not the only things sent back to Europe."-- Container.

The Art of the Steal.

IFC in Theaters : MPI Media Group, c2010

It's been called the greatest theft of art since the Second World War. Reveals how a private collection of paintings became the envy of the Louvre, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and other major institutions, and the prize in a battle between one man's vision and the forces of commerce and politics. Founded in 1922 by wealthy American drug developer and art collector Albert C. Barnes, the Barnes Foundation became the finest collection of paintings by Renoir, Cezanne, Matisse, and Van Gogh. Barnes envisioned his foundation as an art school, not a public museum. But since his death in 1951, the collection has been fought over. One side defending Barnes' wish that the collection never be moved, loaned, or sold and the other side pushing to relocate it to downtown Philadelphia.

"Chinese traditional painting expresses the essence of Chinese culture. Using brush-pens, ink, paper, and ink-stones as tools, traditional painting has its own unique system for portraits, landscapes, flowers, birds, and other animals. This episode follows the trail of influential artists. It also describes the spiritual framework that developed Chinese traditional painting by examining their works, techniques, and individual life experiences"—Container.

Corpus Callosum .

Electronic Arts Intermix, (2004)

"The corpus callosum is a central region of tissue in the human brain which passes 'messages' between the two hemispheres ... [This film] is constructed of, de-picts, creates, examines, presents, consists of, and is, 'betweens.' Between beginning and ending, between 'natural' and 'artificial,' between fiction and fact, between hearing and seeing, between 1956 and 2002. It's a tragi-comedy of the cinematic variables. *Corpus Callosum juxtaposes or counterpoints a realism of normal metamorphosis (two extreme examples: pregnancy, explosions) in believable, 'real' interior spaces with 'impossible' shape changes (some made possible with digital animation) ... *Corpus Callosum is resolutely 'artificial,' it not only wants to convince, but also to be a perceived pictorial and musical phenomenon"--Michael Snow on Electronic Arts Intermix's website.

Chris Burden's provocative, often shocking conceptual performance pieces of the early 1970s retain their raw and confrontational force in these dramatic visual records, shot on Super-8, 16mm film, and half-inch video. Guided by the artist's candid, explanatory comments on both the works and the documentative process, these segments reveal the major themes of Burden's work -- the psychological experience of danger, pain, and physical risk, the aggressive abuse of the body as an art object, and the psychology of the artist/spectator relationship.

Home Vision Select (1998)

Explores the art and culture of Russia in a journey across history, encompassing Russia's architecture, paintings, music, literature and cinema. Part 1 examines icon painting, the first Russian art form, and reveals the spiritual ideas that have animated Russia for 1000 years, and witnesses recent restorations of churches and monasteries from Kiev to the Kremlin. Part 2 examines Russian architecture from Eastern-inspired onion domes to Western-type palaces. Also looks at the writings of Gogol who revealed the human suffering behind Russia's facade. His Dead souls inspired 19th-century radicals and Soviet dissidents, and continues to influence Russian artists today. Part 3 explores Russian music and cinema and looks at how new media forms are shaping Russia today. Musorgsky's opera Boris Godunov dramatized the conflict between power and the people. Sergei Eisenstein retold history with silent films of such power that they became more real than actual events.

Short films from Forcefield, an artist collective from Providence, Rhode Island. ..."Features the group's earliest videos. These loosely-wrought narrative vignettes combine Forcefield's shrouded figures, handmade props, and a range of evocative backdrops, brought together by hyperkinetic editing, video effects, and vivid electronic soundtracks. Video I appears to be a short story without resolution. We are given the following disparate clues: A repetitive, static-like noise; flashing portraits of a stuffed, chattering robot; overlapping, abstract animations; and images of walking and tapping knit booties. In Video II, three shrouded, hypnotically bobbing characters are animated by a continuously rolling moon, abstract flashing blobs, and a repetitive electronic soundtrack. They then scatter from one end of the screen to the other. In The Sad Robot a friendly-looking robot is struck by a laser in a field. Video III combines glimpses of a frenzied, cultish congregation, sketches reminiscent of a children's TV program, and a rich, noisy electronic soundtrack. Live 2000 documents an energetic and intriguing performance at the Safari Lounge in Providence, RI"--

PBS (1994)

Pt. 1: Catherine the Great: A Lust for Art. Investigates a self-professed "glutton for beauty". She purchased massive art collections from Europe's monarchs, then created The Hermitage Museum in the Winter Palace to house her treasures. (54 min.)

Pt. 2: Tyrants and Heroes: The Nineteenth Century Czars. Depicts the wrenching violence of the 19th century and the resplendent art Russian royalty collected during the era. From the priceless discoveries of Russia's first archaeological commission, to Alexander III's reign of terror, explores the uplifting and destructive forces that shaped Russia and its museum. (53 min.)

Pt. 3: From Czars to Commissars: A Museum Survives. The horrors of revolution and war play counterpoint to works by Matisse, Renoir, and Picasso. Under Lenin the Hermitage became the world's largest museum. Stalin sold many of the museum's treasures for cash. Two thirds of its collection were transported out of Leningrad before the Nazi siege. Chronicles the museum's triumphs over cataclysmic world events. (55 min.)

A History of European Art.

Teaching Co., c2005

The development of the arts in Europe from the Middle Ages to the modern era is an astonishing record of cultural achievement, from the breathtaking architecture of Gothic cathedrals to the daring visual experiments of the Cubist painters. We all have our favorite artists, periods, or styles from this immensely rich tradition, but how many of us truly know the full sweep of European art? How many of us can connect the dots of influences and inspiration that link the Renaissance with Mannerism, or that tie the paintings of the creator of modern art, Edouard Manet, to masterpieces from centuries earlier? These lectures feature more than 850 images of drawings, paintings, prints, sculptures, and architecture, beginning with the age of Charlemagne through the onset of World War II.

How We Do Art Now.

Electronic Arts Intermix (1973)

"In the performance How various persons spit out beans, a series of people, seen in profile, spit beans from their mouths. The simple act grows in comic intensity as the participants use various inept and expert methods to perform the action. The droll Cigar Lexicon merges Baldessari's project of compiling a "dictionary of images" with his strategy of defining an object's quintessence through continued repetition of an action. Working at a methodical pace, he solemnly demonstrates and numbers fifteen stages of smoking a cigar. He bites the tip off (#1), lights it, blows smoke rings at various angles, rolls it in both hands, breaks it in half, retrieves a new cigar, and finally discards it. Alluding to Magritte's painting Ceci n'est pas un pipe and Freud's famous remark that "Sometimes a cigar is just a cigar," Baldessari exploits the symbolic meaning of simple actions, rendering them slightly ridiculous"--Publisher's website.

Looking For an Icon

First Run/Icarus Films, c2005

For the last fifty years, a professional jury of the World Press Photo Foundation has selected one photograph as the "World Press Photo of the Year". Some of these images have had such an impact on society that they have become symbols of their time - true historical icons. This documentary examines the process by which photos become icons, revealing that once a photo is published, social forces beyond the photographer's control are at work. The film focuses on four World Press Photo winners: Eddie Adams' 1968 photo of the public execution of a Viet Cong prisoner, an anonymous photographer's last image of Salvador Allende during the 1973 coup, Charlie Cole's 1989 photo of a lone student confronting tanks in Tiananmen Square, and David Turnley's 1991 photo of a grieving soldier during the first Gulf War.

The Making of Super Mario Clouds.

Electronic Arts Intermix, (2004)

"In the first part of this work, Arcangel silently documents the real-time construction of his video game cartridge piece, Super Mario Clouds, in which he hacked a "Mario Brothers" cartridge, erasing everything but the blue sky and clouds. The Making of ..., which Arcangel calls "a documentary on making a cartridge," records the artist in this apartment, making the cartridge for the 2004 Whitney Biennial, where Super Mario Clouds was exhibited. While The Making of Super Mario Clouds poses as an instructional video, willfully amateur camerawork and the omission of any soundtrack indicate the artist's intentions: to give viewers, in his words, "a feel for the process, in its gloriously boring true detail." The second part is a 9-minute video re-scan of the clouds" repeated over and over-- Electronic Arts Intermix website.

[Manet] The Shock of the Nude: Manet's Olympia.

WGBH Educational Foundation
 Scandal surrounded the Paris 1865 exhibition of the painting, Olympia. Manet had dared to portray visual art's most universal subject, the nude, as an unidealized woman--a prostitute who stares directly at the viewer. He flouted the accepted ideas of beauty and propriety in art and outraged audiences. Although Olympia is now regarded at a masterpiece, visual artists continue to test society's conventions.

Home Vision Arts (1997)

In this overview of the life and work of M.C. Escher, examples of his incredibly detailed prints are shown and analyzed with particular attention to his use of symmetry and geometrical figures. Patterns in the Italian countryside and mosaic tiles from Spain were two major influences in the printmaker's work, as was the work of mathematicians specializing in "impossible objects" which could be drawn, but not created in three-dimensional space. Escher incorporated all of these elements to create a fantastic world described as an encounter between imagination and the culture of mathematics and science.

Selected Works. Reel 1. William Wegman

Electronic Arts Institute, [200-?]

"In Reel 1, Wegman creates deadpan one-liners and ironic sight gags from materials that include his own body, everyday objects such as balls and dolls, and his dog Man Ray. The humor derives from the wild incongruity of expected and actual behavior or events. Inanimate objects are personified; extended actions lead to absurd anticlimaxes. In Singing stomach, Wegman sits in a chair, his bare torso facing the camera. As he gruffly hums a song, his torso becomes a face, with nipples as eyes, navel as mouth. Raising his arms, the "facial" features change gender and he hums in falsetto. Other segments find him blowing a feather from his nose and creating pendulous female "breasts" by folding his elbows to his body. The ever-obliging Man Ray drags a microphone in his mouth, laps up milk that Wegman has drooled onto the floor, and, in an oddly poetic exercise, runs through a darkened room with a flashlight in his mouth"--Publisher's website.

Shigeko Kubota Video Sculpture.

Electronic Arts Intermix, [2005?]

"Kubota's conceptual and visual inventiveness and art historical wit are evident in such works as Duchampiana: nude descending a staircase (1976), in which video monitors in the configuration of a wooden staircase show the synthesized image of a descending woman, or Bicycle wheel (1983), in which a miniature video monitor revolves on the eponymous wheel. Works such as Niagara Falls (1985) are breathtaking celebrations of natural landscape, poetically transformed by technology. This comprehensive historical overview of Kubota's installation work is a lucid visual document. In addition to the above-mentioned works, this compilation includes such major pieces as Duchampiana: chess (1968-75), Duchampiana: Duchamp's grave (1972-75), Meta-Marcel: window snow (1976), Three mountains(1976-79), River(1981), Video haiku hanging piece(1981) Meta-Marcel: window stars (1982), Meta-Marcel: window flowers (1983), Video relief (1983), Green installation (1983), Window in window (1983), Rock video: cherry blossom(1986), and Dry mountain, dry water(1987-88)"--

BBC Video (2007)

Focusing on eight iconic works of art, this series reveals the history of visual imagination through the ages. A combination of reconstruction, photography and storytelling transport the viewer back to the intense moments when great works were conceived and born: the murderous, messianic world of Baroque Rome; opulent, parvenu Amsterdam; paranoid, revolutionary Paris; Victorian England suffocating beneath riches and righteousness; the madhouses and brothels of Provence; the carnage of civil war Spain; 1950s New York, caught between Cold War jitters and Manhattan glitter. In each place, a great artist is backed into a corner, facing a crisis, given a chance to confound his rivals, enemies and critics one more time.
