
2011 Nevada Gaming Market

Summary of Statistics, Broken Down by Reporting Area

From Wendover to Primm (and many points in between) the casino gaming landscape of Nevada covers a great deal of territory. Yet the revenues earned from the 344 or so locations scattered across the state are not evenly distributed; the vast majority of casino revenues for the state are generated in Clark County, Nevada, and the majority of them come from the Las Vegas Strip.

The top four counties generating revenues were Clark (86.19% of the state total), Washoe (6.97%), Elko (2.49%), and Douglas (1.96%). Within Clark County, the Las Vegas Strip (56.71%), Balance of County (9.61%), Boulder Strip (7.28%), and Downtown Las Vegas (4.64%) were the top revenue earners.

Perhaps not surprisingly, the top revenue-earning area out-performed the rest of the state on a per-table and per-device basis. The Las Vegas Strip, for example, has 29.63% of the state's slot machines, but earned 42.87% of the state's slot revenue for the year under study. With table games, the Strip had 51.60% of all games, but earned 80.90% of all table game revenue. For the most part, all other locations under-performed, earning less per machine and per table than they should, from a strictly numerical perspective.

As a snapshot of where Nevada gaming revenues are generated, this summary is interesting, if only because it gives statistical meaning to the sense that Clark County, and the Las Vegas Strip in particular, are the drivers of Nevada's gaming revenue.
