Historical Background

Greenpeace was founded in 1971 by a group of anti-nuclear weapons activists, and one of the organization's primary goals was to bring attention to the dangers of nuclear testing. Since its founding, Greenpeace has been an active voice on environmental issues such as instituting commercial whaling bans, stopping nuclear testing, and protecting Antarctica. Greenpeace maintained an office in Las Vegas, Nevada from 1982 through 1993 as a part of the Greenpeace Pacific Southwest (GPW) region. The majority of Greenpeace's work in Southern Nevada focused on demonstrations and activism at the Nevada Test Site.

Scope and Contents Note

The Greenpeace Pacific Southwest Records span 1962 to 1994. The records are comprised of files from Greenpeace officers and activists in Southern Nevada pertaining to environmental issues, and deal primarily with demonstrations against nuclear testing in Nevada at the Nevada Test Site. The records contain Greenpeace Pacific Southwest's financial records, meeting minutes, protest information, correspondence, Nevada Test Site information, newspaper articles, newsletters, and publications. Also included in the materials are Greenpeace's articles of incorporation, applications for tax-exempt status, maps, and documents concerning environmental issues such as nuclear waste, land use, wildlife protection, and international environmental activism. The materials also contain Greenpeace interviews on cassette tape and CD, and Greenpeace ephemera such as a Greenpeace necklace, pins, and buttons.
