Historical Note

Las Vegas High School is the oldest ongoing school in Las Vegas, Nevada. The school dates back to at least the early 1900s, undergoing a number of location and name changes over the course of its history. Originally known as the Clark County School in 1902, the school's first official building finished construction in 1905 at the corner of 2nd street and Lewis Avenue. This location burned down on October 29, 1910, and in 1911, it was rebuilt on 4th Street and Lewis Avenue. In 1917, the first Las Vegas High School was created next door on 4th Street and Clark Avenue. By 1930, the growing population of the city led to the construction of a new building on 7th street and Bridger Avenue, which is today known as the Las Vegas Academy of the Arts in the heart of Downtown Las Vegas. In the early 1930s, Las Vegas High School adopted its mascot the Wildcat. The first Las Vegas High School building at 4th Street and Clark Avenue burned down on May 24, 1934, but by that time it was converted to be a part of the Las Vegas Grammar School, today known as the Historic Fifth Street School. The current location of Las Vegas High School is at 6500 East Sahara Avenue, and it continues the traditional namesake and mascot of the historic school.
